Goldilocks and the three

The other trolls are just like me.
They have shown me how

Dear diary 5 00 000 bc

I woke up at 5 o'clock and I went outside. The big storm had destroyed the camp. I started to make breakfast. It was better stew and rice. I had breakfast. It was yummy. We were preparing for hunting. It's going to be a big scary hunt because we are looking for food. We set off for hunting. A man found a big group of deer so we shook our spears and we got a lot. I was getting the deer so we went home. We had a big feast. When we went hunting today I was not surprised that we got a lot of deer because we had a lot of men. Tomorrow

Diary Entry

Task: Pretend that you are a ten-year-old that lives with your family on the goldfields during the Australian Gold Rush. Write a diary entry describing what a day for you is like.

Wednesday

Today I had an argument with my dad in the workshop about being a Sine work maker and he didn't tell me the secret. At 12.00 my dad told Chubak the secret. Chubak told me. I was surprised.

Thursday

At 3.00 I ran away to Mount Merapi to find out the secret and I left a letter to tell him I'm leaving! I was scared but I had to do it. In a jungle I met some pirates. They said there was a river trail so I got on. They pulled out some daggers.

The Lyme Reporter 08.10.21
found 5th golden ticket

As crowds gathered outside the largest chocolate factory in the world, five small children were being interviewed by news reporters. On February 1st 10 o'clock sharp, a fragile grumpy Joe and a tiny Charlie Bucket were waiting to go into the tall, squeaky gates of the mysterious factory.

Reports suggest the chocolate factory is opening after 10 years! Experts believe it's 50 times the size of any other. However, the chocolate factory has been producing large quantities of chocolate bars and distributing them all over the world.

Charlie Bucket, who is one of the five lucky winners, found his golden ticket in his local sweet shop. Evidence suggests that he lives in an old, disgusting cottage with his poor family and this is the lucky break they all need.

I can write the first section of my story using descriptive devices.

Poppy, the youngest sibling, whose hair is brown, smooth and silky and whose eyes are blue, cheerfully ran through the massive hallways of this huge mansion. A happy, cheerful girl who was full of joy and looked out a mystery. As she walked on, she noticed something in the corner of her eye. It was a reading room full of books. She suddenly saw a book and a book shelf opened and it was a door now. She slowly walked into the glowy light. The book shelf was full of colourful books. Inside the magical land lives a pirate island and also discovered that was not ordinary to look like. She heard a sound coming from after. She walked over the sand was as soft as a fluffy book.

It seems to be a boat riding on the shores. "Hello hello is anyone here?" Shouts Poppy.

"A boy there one maby!" Came a voice.

"Hi hi there," exclaims Poppy.

"I'm captain Clumsy!" said clumsy Clumsy.

"I'm lost," questions Poppy.

"I can show you the way!" he says.

"Thank you," Exclaims Poppy.

"Right this way," says clumsy Clumsy.

He takes her to a hole in the sand and it takes her back to the

As we looked through the window the Mercedes glimmered under the lights. It was in the middle of all the cars. I glanced at Lucy and said "Do you think we should try and get it?" "Wouldn't that be too far?" she replied. We made the choice to go in. Then the salesman came up to us and asked "May I help you two?" "May I take a look at that Mercedes?" I replied. Lucy just stood silently, glaring at the Mercedes. "You can fit our newest model, clear blue tooth speaker, radio that gives out messages that are easy to understand and the comfiest leather seats." He remarked "would you like to do a test drive?" I responded "yes, I would like to." "Time's up!" said the boss, hung from the salesman's hand, clinking quietly. Lucy's smile vanished on her face as she looked towards me. I gasped. The cold metal and hard plastic my hand trembled as a shiver was sent down my back. Lucy went pale and glanced at the seats. I stroked the seats and glanced maliciously at her. In just some minutes, the car was already out.

Rubbing his wrists vigorously, Stanley Stanley stopped out the bus carefully. The bus had been stuffily and indolently moved around, the terrain was barren and had no greenery. He noticed quite far off a couple of buildings, indicating he was guessing near the camp. They appeared into the ground a bit and three distinct seem to be anyone there. And so he sun was blazing across the place the sky was a sapphire sapphire blue faded to a white. The bushes didn't look alive in Stanley in dead like brown surrounded by rocks and scuffing towards the ground was as dry as a campfire log. He just seemed to be isolated. With dark grey remains he could smell it in the air along with the sounds of scattering wood-boring wind and the path of snakes. Dead oak shrubs pushed against his skin. Grains of sand were gelling in his shoes, the breeze was bringing dust, sand, hot and cold air into my face. He knew Stanley could taste his own sweat and the dust and grains of sand in his mouth. While winds scattered around, gnats, beetles and stinked shadows dance in space. Stanley could hear the ground stepping out of the bus it suddenly came to realization came to his head that this was where he was staying. He let out a sigh as it came to realization he was just staying here a few weeks or days. He knew Stanley was staying for a few months maybe even a year. The realization struck for who him.

To my darling wife,

I have tremendous news to share with you about the battle against Norway. But thankfull they are away so you, woman, Banquo, who is very brave and always had my back, stayed to the very end. It was quite scary because the worst blood stains everywhere and dead bodies laying on the floor. Now I'm on my way home as soon as possible.

So me and Banquo where travelling home and bumped into these old boys. I asked them who they are and they said it's a secret. Randomly, they mention my name and said "one day Macbeth, you will become the Thane of Caudor." Me and Banquo freaked out and went red. They had a pointy nose and pointy fingers with a hairy mustards. I could tell they're up to something naughty. Interestingly, the old women said to Banquo one day your children are going to be the kings.

Hansel and Gretel

I can see the resolution and ending of a story.

I can see a range of complex sentences.

(P1)

Hour after hour, day after day, week after week the elderly women kept speaking him. Hansel turned heavier and heavier, fatter and fatter, gatter and gatter. He was 100% heavier, fatter and fatter but in the world... but she still didn't know. 4 weeks later, the kidnapper's patience ran out. After speaking to Hansel, she made Gretel to set a fire. Gretel makes an excuse and said "I can't make this gas light lit it is to hard". The old not and replied "You are not good at anything let me try." 193 Slowly she learnt over the gas and ACH!, the woman screamed. Gretel pushed her in. She slammed the door so she burnt alive.

Gretel needed to find the keys to free herself and Hansel. 30 minutes later, she spotted a white rack of keys. Gretel reached to get the brush and hooked onto the keys. Suddenly, she tried every key, until the magic happened. Quickly, the girl stood up and ran to the room at the back where Hansel is. "Are you ok?" asked Gretel for breath. "Yes I'm fine, can you help me out?" replied Hansel. Meanwhile, Gretel ~~was~~ was searching which is the key, Hansel felt sick. At last Hansel was free after a month. In the corner of his eye, he spotted a shiny chest. None of the keys would fit so they went hunting for a big key.
