

Light

Since the dark they have lived with us
Hair growing, body melting
Causing disaster yet making joy,
Lighting up hearts
Dancing in the breeze

Shrinking, growing.
Giving a crack: the hair will grow
A whiff of scent they give
Purple lavender, red roses
When attacked- it is a flicker of joy that will disappear

Instead of darkness, you have light!
Black shadows, eerie silence
And these stars that are controlled
Light to our eyes, warmth to our hearts
Relaxing

The heart like a soothing bath at the end of the day,
Gazing up at the starry night sky
Reading a book in front of a blazing fire.
Cuddling up to our loved ones
Serene, solemn

A little child holding their breath
What will happen next?
Looking through it, seeing a steamed world on the other side
Released, smoke hovering in the air

A scented block of wax,
A shocked face,
Seeing a world all flickered -
A dead flame
In the little fist.
